Scientists are displaying a keen interest in the teleview, or "televue," as the inventor, J. B. Fowler, of San Diego, Cal., prefers to call it, and which, when completed and placed under the telephone, will enable persons talking to see each other as plainly as if they were in the same

Like almost all other marvelous inventions, the televue is extremely simple in principle. The user sits down in front of the instrument, and a strong light is thrown on the face by some five or six electric globes. Under the telephone mouthpiece is a large round disc of glass, somewhat thicker in the middle than on the edges. In the center of the glass there is a small hole, and through this the sitter is able to see the person to whom he is

The secret of the invention, Mr. Fowler says, lies in the perfect mechanical and chemical combinations. During the entire conversation the televue keeps up a constant buzz.

The inventor predicts that in a very short time one will be able to talk from New York to Chicago and see the person at the other end of The possibilities are infinite, as the televue can be developed to include such work as exploring sunken wrecks and presenting views of articles from the home or office For instance, the housewife can call up her grocer and order her weekly supplies without the slightest fear of getting old goods.

She can select a dress pattern from a department store and never leave her spartment. Mr. Fowler says he worked twenty-six years before he completed the invention.
